Comprometiéndose con la educación de sus hijos

The infographic is divided into two main sections: 'Before' and 'After', separated by a large blue arrow pointing from left to right. The 'Before' section is on a blue background and shows a mother in a green shirt asking, 'What did you learn at school today?' to a girl in an orange jacket and a boy in a yellow shirt. The girl replies, 'Nothing...'. The 'After' section is on a light grey background and shows two scenarios. In the first, a mother in an orange shirt shows a smartphone to a girl, with a speech bubble saying, 'Your child wrote a really good poem in writing class today. You could ask him to read it to you.' In the second, a mother in a blue jacket shows a smartphone to a girl and a boy, with a speech bubble saying, 'I heard you wrote a really good poem today? Tell me about it.' The girl replies, 'Oh yes!'. A clock icon is in the top left of the 'Before' section. A large blue arrow labeled 'After' points from the 'Before' section to the 'After' section. A white arrow labeled 'Before' points from the 'After' section back to the 'Before' section.

Before

What did you learn at school today?

Nothing...

After

Get talking!
Rather than just asking "What did you do at school today?", start a great conversation.

Your child wrote a really good poem in writing class today. You could ask him to read it to you.

I heard you wrote a really good poem today? Tell me about it.

Oh yes!
